

Bobby Glushko is an Associate Chief Librarian at Western Libraries with the primary accountability for research and scholarly communications. His research and professional practice focuses on the radical changes wrought by a globally connected world and the opportunities and challenges those changes pose for libraries, universities, and society at large.